

It would be absolutely criminal to relax the rules allowing media corporations to move toward monopoly control over news and entertainment. As it is, we get slanted and incomplete reporting. Shame on you if you allow corporations to shut out voices of opposition. Journalism is supposed to be the 4th estate, a watchdog on government. It is fast becoming the mouthpiece of government and thereby a mouthpiece for the corporations which contribute to the candidates. For heaven's sake, do what you know is right here: don't relax the rules; tighten them!
